Welcome to NAGOYA

Nagoya is one of the three major metropolitan areas in Japan, along with Tokyo and Osaka. Nagoya has its own unique characteristics—including traditional arts, cuisine and manufacturing technologies—surrounded by a growing forest of modern buildings. Look around, learn something, and enjoy this attractive city. Wonderful memories await to be made during your visit here.
What is Nagoya like?
Nagoya is not only famous for its liveliness, but also for its various, must-see historical sites and points of interest including Nagoya Castle, shrines and temples, and resource centers, which have invaluable cultural merit.

Must-see Sights

Nagoya Castle
In 1612, Nagoya Castle was built as a residence of the Tokugawa family. It was rebuilt in 1959. The pair of golden "shachi" on its soaring roof symbolize the castle and the city of Nagoya.

Sakae Area
Sakae is one of the two major shopping areas in Nagoya, along with the Nagoya Station area. Department stores and luxury brand stores are concentrated here, and filled with the latest fashion trends.

Osu Kannon Temple
This bustling, vibrant red temple is especially crowded during holidays and festivals. A great place for discounted goods, "Osu Shopping Malls," is located beside the temple.

Osu Kannon Temple
This bustling, vibrant red temple is especially crowded during holidays and festivals. A great place for discounted goods, "Osu Shopping Malls," is located beside the temple.

Tokugawaen
The second lord, Mitsumoto of the Owari Branch of Tokugawa family, settled here to retire in 1695. It is a stroll style landscaped garden centered around an inner pond reminiscent of the feudal lord grounds.

The Tokugawa Art Museum
This museum contains historic artifacts from the Owari Branch of the Tokugawa family. “The Illustrated Tale of Genji,” a designated national treasure, is the centerpiece of its collection.

Toyota Commemorative Museum of Industry and Technology
Jointly established by the 13 companies of the Toyota Group, textile machinery and automobiles are the focus of the exhibits. Manufacturing machine history, from its early beginnings to present day computer controlled machines, is on display with the opportunity to operate some of the machines yourself.

Higashiyama Zoo and Botanical Gardens
This is a comprehensive park consisting of a zoo, botanical garden and amusement park. A nocturnal animal house is also a very popular attraction. The botanical garden has a large greenhouse, and the Manyo Passage and flower gardens are a nice place to visit.

Atsuta Shrine
Surrounded by 1,000 year-old camphor trees, Atsuta Shrine, with its 1,900 year history, is one of three grand shrines in Japan. Notable attractions here include "Nobunaga Wall," and Atsuta Jingu Museum.

Shirotori Garden
Only a few minutes walk from Nagoya Congress Center, there is a traditional Japanese garden where you can enjoy the beautiful scenery and "Matcha"—powdered green tea.
Typical Japanese food like sushi and tempura are tasty, but trying unique local cuisine is also a must for the palate. Nagoya has many unique dishes such as misonikomi udon and temmusu, among others.

Local Dishes of Nagoya

Misonikomi
Nagoyans eat this version of udon cooked in a miso base soup with various vegetables and meats.

Kishimen
Broad, flat wheat noodles in a broth with soy sauce and various toppings like tempura or green onions. Try it at restaurants or even on the platforms of big train stations.

Misokatsu
A Nagoya favorite, these breaded pork cutlets are served with a thick miso sauce and other side dishes to complete a lunch or dinner set.

Tebasaki
Tebasaki is deep-fried chicken wingtips. Once tasted, it is never forgotten. The spicy flavor also goes very well with beer or sake, Japanese rice wine.

Temmusu
A mouthful size rice ball containing fried shrimp.

Nagoya Cochin
Nagoya Cochin, a variety of chicken, is well known for its crispiness and delicious taste. You can enjoy it cooked in a number of ways.

Souvenirs of Nagoya

Nagoya Sensu (folding fans)
Dating back to the mid-18th century, Nagoya Sensu traces its origins to a family of Kyoto fan manufacturers. Made of paper and bamboo, these ceremonial fans often bear fine calligraphy or designs of great elegance.

Nagoya Yuzen (hand-painted yuzen dyeing & stenciled yuzen dyeing)
These elegantly designed garments result from an intricate process of freehand drawing and dyeing. Stenciled Yuzen dyeing calls for the dye to be brushed on through paper stencils. To make a colorful Yuzen fabric, numerous stencils—each for a specific color—are employed.

Arimatsu-Narumi Shibori (tie-dyeing)
This is a tie-dyeing technique from the late 16th century used to create elegant and refined designs. Here are many kinds of tie-dyed goods, such as clothing materials and small articles.

Cloisonné
Originating from Dutch cloisonné over a century and a half ago, Owari-Shippo utilizes various enamels filled into cells on a metal frame. The product is heated to an extremely high temperature and polished, resulting in beautiful plates or vases.
NAGOYA STATION AREA

Many department stores, office buildings and hotels are located in this area. The Toyota Commemorative Museum of Industry and Technology will allow the visitor to appreciate the top-level manufacturing technology of Japan.

Underground Shopping Mall

Nagoya has one of the largest underground shopping mall in Japan. Various shops line the arcade, including snack shops, fashion stores, and souvenir shops. Besides the above ground attractions, looking around the underground mall is also recommended.

Wetlands designated under the Ramsar Convention

Fujiwara Tidal Flat

The Fujimae Tidal Flat is an approximately 300-hectare tidal flat at the mouths of the Shonai, Shinkawa and Nikko rivers as they flow into the Port of Nagoya. The Fujimae Tidal Flat was designated under the Ramsar Convention on Wetlands on November 18, 2002. It is internationally known as Japan's largest stopover site for migratory birds, visited by roughly 60 species of shorebirds.
